Dr. Katz conducted fieldwork in prehistoric and historic archeology for more than 30 years. Her primary interests included the study of human adaptation at the mountain-plains periphery, archeology of arid lands and lithic technology. She conducted inventory, assessments and mitigation projects in archeology for state and federal agencies, private companies and individuals. Her recent work included the analysis of excavations at a Late Plains Village site in the southeastern Texas Panhandle and a monograph about an intensive survey of Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument and adjacent portions of Lake Meredith National Recreation Area.

She researched and created a large traveling exhibit on the natural and cultural history of the playa lakes region, which received the American Association of Museum's "Excellence in Exhibition" in 2005 for its content and innovative design. At the time of her death, she was the editor of the Plains Anthropologist, an academic peer-review journal concerned with the anthropology and archeology of the Great Plains of North America, an area covering 13 states and three Canadian provinces. She was active in the Panhandle Archeological Society and was a member of Temple B'Nai Israel in Amarillo.

Survivors include her husband, Dr. Paul Katz, and a brother, Leonard Rothstein of Paramus, N.J.
